Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 04 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Fine with warm sunshine. Cloudier towards the south and east.

Today:
Rather cloudy start, but with brighter or sunny intervals through the morning. Thicker cloud likely spreading north, however, particularly across Lincolnshire where outbreaks of rain are possible. Feeling warm in any brighter intervals, but cooler beneath the thicker cloud. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Tonight:
Any rain soon clearing east, however cloud across Lincolnshire only gradually easing away. Clear skies developing elsewhere, and turning chilly, with areas of mist and fog possible by dawn. Minimum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Saturday:
Any early mist and fog patches soon lifting. A mainly dry day follows, with sunny spells and variable cloud. Feeling warm in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 24 deg C (75 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Warm sunny spells and variable cloud expected through the period, although perhaps cloudier on Sunday. Many parts staying dry, but the risk of showers throughout. Rather chilly overnight periods.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.